NORTHWESTERN UNIVERSITY

July 8, 2020

Dear President Schapiro and Interim Provost Hagerty,

We, the undersigned members of the Department of Psychology, are writing to urge that the Northwestern administration take all practical steps to resist the recent ICE mandate jeopardizing the right of international students to remain in the US. As you know, international students are highly valued members of our community. Their contributions to the intellectual life of our department are essential. They belong in our community, and their health and safety must not be compromised to meet the requirements of this mandate. This mandate threatens to upend the life and livelihood of all students, staff, and faculty by placing unjust demands on the university. Although this policy change specifically targets international students, we as a community are all affected by it, and we need to show a strong, collective response.

As Harvard and MIT have already done, we urge the Northwestern administration to take available legal actions to protect the rights and well-being of our international students. We hope that Northwestern will also be willing to take a leadership role in opposing this unfair and ill-advised mandate. We whole-heartedly support all such efforts.

Sincerely,
